

Collaboration Helps Ensure Successful School Reopening

After much preparation and teamwork, over 60 students returned to the League School campus on July 13 for in-person learning. Through the collaboration of staff, parents, the Mass Association of 766 Approved Private Schools (maaps), the state, and Board of Directors, the first month has run relatively smoothly, and our students are adjusting to their revamped programs. ## maaps Plays Instrumental Role in Helping Special Ed Schools Navigate COVID-19

Since COVID-19 first hit the United States, there's been a lot of unknowns for the special education industry: day school facility closings; remote learning; residential program continuity; tuition payment issues; safety protocols; transportation funding; and return to campus logistics.

"There was no way to ask, 'What did we do last time?' to inform our next steps," said League School Executive Director, Larry Sauer. "maaps has provided more information than any other organization during this difficult time, and their role is an important part of the survival of our industry." Read more
